Urges Bucks Co. Residents to Support USF; First Campaign Begins Nov. 10th; Request Morrisville-Yardley-Falls Residents' Support

USF is Now Considering Applications from County Social Groups

Residents of the Morrisville-Yardley-Falls Township area were urged today to contribute to the Bucks County Community Chest Campaign in preference to welfare fund raising groups outside of the county.

Frederick J. Rarig, campaign chairman for the first county-wide drive under the auspices of the Bucks County United Services Federation, said in a statement released today that experience in past years indicates that benefits available to Bucks Countians from these outside groups are very few. "After several years of existence, the Trenton fund has enrolled only one Bucks County agency in its fund raising campaign," Rarig said.

"The United Services Federation is now considering applications for financial participation from leading Bucks County social work groups," he said, "and the first Community Chest Campaign for funds will be held from November 10 to 25.

"The Federation has been formed in response to the concern on the part of great numbers of local residents who have long felt that the thousands of dollars going out of the county each year to outside agencies should go toward the betterment of existing groups in Bucks County. These are the agencies actively engaged in improving the social and welfare standards in the county," Rarig continued.

"The problems of the county are unique," he said, "and only planning and organization from within can cope with them to the best interests of all residents." He added that every resident should certainly consider how much his contributions to charity go toward the improvement of the health and welfare of his own neighbors and community.

Rarig said that a list of participating agencies, and their budget requirements will be released by mid-October. He explained that all agencies in the county will form a Council of Social Agencies to promote the co-operative planning of the county's needs. Many of these agencies also take part in the fund raising campaign.

The sum named by the Levitt organization is for 16.5233 acres located on the Sayko and Henry Lovett farm south of the Penn Valley-Emilie rd. The purchase cost of the ground was reported to have been $2250 per acre.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Premier Yoshida's Liberal party that had pressed a Japanese alliance with the West appeared to have scored a sweeping victory in Japan's first free post-war election. The Communists had not elected a single Parliament member when half the votes were counted.

Chinese Communist prisoners in a camp on Cheju Island refused to obey orders to end noisy demonstrations and by the time United States troops had restored order fifty-two of the prisoners had been killed and more than 100 wounded. Fighting at the front subsided.

There are about 300 submarines in the Soviet Navy, four times the number the Germans had at the start of the last war, Navy Secretary Kimball estimated. He said the United States Navy had a guided missile ship and that craft in Korean waters could use atomic weapons.

Western Germany, according to that country's nuclear physicist and Nobel Prize winner, will be permitted by the West to mine uranium and build an atomic pile for peaceful uses.

At the British Labor party's conferences, Right and Center forces launched strong attacks against the Bevan Left that had score a tactical victory Tuesday.

Former Attorney General McGrath showed a "deplorable lack of knowledge" of the Justice Department and "no enthusiasm for puruging" it of "wrongdoers or incompetents," a House committee that inquired into the department declared. The report also severely criticized former Assistant Attorney General Vanech.

A "conspiracy" to fix prices and hamper competitors in the liquor business was charged against the parent Seagrams and Schenley companies by the Federal Trade Commission. The complaints are believed to be the first step in a wide attack on holding companies accused of price-fixing among their subsidiaries.

General Smith's statement that Communists might have infiltrated Government security agencies has had several political repercussions. After the Republican National Committee had exploited this in a radio "expose", General Smith urged General Eisenhower to stop the political use of the remarks. The Republican candidate replied he had not known about the "expose" and would look into it. President Truman accepted General Smith's explanation of the train of events.

On the political front, President Truman, dedicating the Hungry Horse Dam in Montana, described General Eisenhower as a pliable mouthpiece of the private power

Community Hospital Work Advances Determinedly

Wishes Mirror Balance Between Early Starting and Waiting for Funds

The following statement has been issued by officials of Lower Bucks Co. Hospital:

The underlying thoughts in the response to last week's published invitations for subscribers of the Lower Bucks County Hospital to express their wishes, mirrors a balance between expressed desire for early starting, and the waiting for needed government funds to insure the success of our venture.

It is understandable, easy and very natural for anyone to get an over-simplified impression of the extensive detail and the work involved in building a community hospital. Essentially education of the public, the truth to the public, knowledge by the public are the only correctives. The hospital is a community project, supported by the residents of the community and thus it should be of a deep concern to all of us. Published information, through the hospital Public Relations Committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Reba C. Goebig, has kept abreast all hospital work to date. Being uninformed due to press of other matters is excusable, however, now, hospital information

Neshaminy Students To Serve As Baby Sitters

Volunteer Their Services To Increase PTA Attendance At Sessions

LANGHORNE, Oct. 2 — With the first meeting of the Neshaminy PTA scheduled for Tuesday evening, October 14, the girls of the 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th grades of Neshaminy high school have volunteered their services as baby sitters in order that more parents may attend PTA meetings. The group that has volunteered—some 45 in all—did so because, as one of their number put it, "It's not only important to parents that they attend PTA meetings, it's important to us that they attend."

While a number of the girls already babysit at "standard" rates per hour, they indicated that for parents who wished to attend the PTA meetings they would be willing to babysit for just a nominal

Whipps Studio To Be Considerably Expanded

Marion Whipps, of Whipps Studio, Bristol, today announced the plans for expansion of his photography studio.

The expansion provides greater facilities for photography, technical and office work.

Presently occupying the front suite of rooms on the second floor at 325 Mill Street, the new studio will take in the entire second story of the building. Plans call for a new individual studio area for photographing babies. This area will be equipped with "props" for children's portraits and a rapid-flash lighting system to catch the child's every move, without the constant glare and hot lights.

By relocating the office equipment to set up a larger office and reception room, Mr. Whipps will have a much greater area for his photography and his technical work.

The expansion of facilities will provide an addition of a "finishing room", a room used for drying, spotting, retouching and coloring of prints.

The date for this expansion program has not been set definately, however, it was explained, "business will be carried on as usual, during the alterations."

United States Troops In Japan Attempt To Be Inconspicuous

Kids Fish in Imperial Outer Moat in Tokyo; Jazz Part of Scene

American troops are deliberately inconspicuous these days in Tokyo now that Japan has regained its sovereignty, but the impact of the occupation lingers everywhere. Those who knew Tokyo before the war would be amazed today at the sight of Japanese dancing to American jazz or kids fishing in the imperial outer moat around Emperor Hirohito's sacred palace grounds. The following article gives a vivid, up-to-date picture of the big Far Eastern city. It is another in the Courier's informal reports from American correspondents abroad to the people at home.

MEMO FROM TOKYO
By Marvin Stone
(Far Eastern Director, I. N. S.)

The third biggest city in the world right now is suffering from one of the weirdest hangovers you ever saw.

Tokyo still is in a tailspin from the "big Yankee typhoon" that started back in 1945, when Gen. Douglas MacArthur swept in from the sea.

It stamped "Made in America" all over Tokyo's face and left behind a mish-mash of land reform, and honky-tonk night clubs; votes for women, and kids who'd rather

Urges Bucks Co. Residents to Support USF; First Campaign Begins Nov. 10th; Request Morrisville-Yardley-Falls Residents' Support

USF is Now Considering Applications from County Social Groups

Residents of the Morrisville-Yardley-Falls Township area were urged today to contribute to the Bucks County Community Chest Campaign in preference to welfare fund raising groups outside of the county.

Frederick J. Rarig, campaign chairman for the first county-wide drive under the auspices of the Bucks County United Services Federation, said in a statement released today that experience in past years indicates that benefits available to Bucks Countians from these outside groups are very few. "After several years of existence, the Trenton fund has enrolled only one Bucks County agency in its fund raising campaign," Rarig said.

"The United Services Federation is now considering applications for financial participation from leading Bucks County social work groups," he said, "and the first Community Chest Campaign for funds will be held from November 10 to 25.

"The Federation has been formed in response to the concern on the part of great numbers of local residents who have long felt that the thousands of dollars going out of the county each year to outside agencies should go toward the betterment of existing groups in Bucks County. These are the agencies actively engaged in improving the social and welfare standards in the county," Rarig continued.

"The problems of the county are unique," he said, "and only planning and organization from within can cope with them to the best interests of all residents." He added that every resident should certainly consider how much his contributions to charity go toward the improvement of the health and welfare of his own neighbors and community.

Rarig said that a list of participating agencies, and their budget requirements will be released by mid-October. He explained that all agencies in the county will form a Council of Social Agencies to promote the co-operative planning of the county's needs. Many of these agencies also take part in the fund raising campaign.

Says Levitt's Offer Of School Site For $76,257 'Ridiculous'

FALLSINGTON, Oct. 2—An offer by William Levitt of Levittown to sell for $76,257.42 to the Falls township school board land which the school board has chosen as the site for a proposed new school has been termed "ridiculous" by James P. Doheny, secretary of the board.

"I wonder if they are trying to sell us a gold mine or oil wells—or land for a new school," said Doheny.

The sum named by the Levitt organization is for 16.5233 acres located on the Sayko and Henry Lovett farm south of the Penn Valley-Emilie rd. The purchase cost of the ground was reported to have been $2250 per acre.

In addition to his cost of the ground Levitt is attempting to get reimbursed for the utility and road costs which according to Doheny

Community Hospital Work Advances Determinedly

Wishes Mirror Balance Between Early Starting and Waiting for Funds

The following statement has been issued by officials of Lower Bucks Co. Hospital:

The underlying thoughts in the response to last week's published invitations for subscribers of the Lower Bucks County Hospital to express their wishes, mirrors a balance between expressed desire for early starting, and the waiting for needed government funds to insure the success of our venture.

It is understandable, easy and very natural for anyone to get an over-simplified impression of the extensive detail and the work involved in building a community hospital. Essentially education of the public, the truth to the public, knowledge by the public are the only correctives. The hospital is a community project, supported by the residents of the community and thus it should be of a deep concern to all of us. Published information, through the hospital Public Relations Committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Reba C. Goebig, has kept abreast all hospital work to date. Being uninformed due to press of other matters is excusable, however, now, hospital information

Volunteer Their Services To Increase PTA Attendance At Sessions

LANGHORNE, Oct. 2 — With the first meeting of the Neshaminy PTA scheduled for Tuesday evening, October 14, the girls of the 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th grades of Neshaminy high school have volunteered their services as baby sitters in order that more parents may attend PTA meetings. The group that has volunteered—some 45 in all—did so because, as one of their number put it, "It's not only important to parents that they attend PTA meetings, it's important to us that they attend."

While a number of the girls already babysit at "standard" rates per hour, they indicated that for parents who wished to attend the PTA meetings they would be willing to babysit for just a nominal

Whipps Studio To Be Considerably Expanded

Marion Whipps, of Whipps Studio, Bristol, today announced the plans for expansion of his photography studio.

The expansion provides greater facilities for photography, technical and office work.

Presently occupying the front suite of rooms on the second floor at 325 Mill Street, the new studio will take in the entire second story of the building. Plans call for a new individual studio area for photographing babies. This area will be equipped with "props" for children's portraits and a rapid-flash lighting system to catch the child's every move, without the constant glare and hot lights.

By relocating the office equipment to set up a larger office and reception room, Mr. Whipps will have a much greater area for his photography and his technical work.

The expansion of facilities will provide an addition of a "finishing room", a room used for drying, spotting, retouching and coloring of prints.

The date for this expansion program has not been set definately, however, it was explained, "business will be carried on as usual, during the alterations."

United States Troops In Japan Attempt To Be Inconspicuous

Kids Fish in Imperial Outer Moat in Tokyo; Jazz Part of Scene

American troops are deliberately inconspicuous these days in Tokyo now that Japan has regained its sovereignty, but the impact of the occupation lingers everywhere. Those who knew Tokyo before the war would be amazed today at the sight of Japanese dancing to American jazz or kids fishing in the imperial outer moat around Emperor Hirohito's sacred palace grounds. The following article gives a vivid, up-to-date picture of the big Far Eastern city. It is another in the Courier's informal reports from American correspondents abroad to the people at home.

MEMO FROM TOKYO
By Marvin Stone
(Far Eastern Director, I. N. S.)

The third biggest city in the world right now is suffering from one of the weirdest hangovers you ever saw.

Tokyo still is in a tailspin from the "big Yankee typhoon" that started back in 1945, when Gen. Douglas MacArthur swept in from the sea.

It stamped "Made in America" all over Tokyo's face and left behind a mish-mash of land reform, and honky-tonk night clubs; votes for women, and kids who'd rather

Pumping engines and two portable pumps were used to draw water from a nearby stream. The firemen were successful in protecting another house and a barn on the Lewis porperty from the fire.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Premier Yoshida's Liberal party that had pressed a Japanese alliance with the West appeared to have scored a sweeping victory in Japan's first free post-war election. The Communists had not elected a single Parliament member when half the votes were counted.

Chinese Communist prisoners in a camp on Cheju Island refused to obey orders to end noisy demonstrations and by the time United States troops had restored order fifty-two of the prisoners had been killed and more than 100 wounded. Fighting at the front subsided.

There are about 300 submarines in the Soviet Navy, four times the number the Germans had at the start of the last war, Navy Secretary Kimball estimated. He said the United States Navy had a guided missile ship and that craft in Korean waters could use atomic weapons.

Western Germany, according to that country's nuclear physicist and Nobel Prize winner, will be permitted by the West to mine uranium and build an atomic pile for peaceful uses.

At the British Labor party's conferences, Right and Center forces launched strong attacks against the Bevan Left that had score a tactical victory Tuesday.

Former Attorney General McGrath showed a "deplorable lack of knowledge" of the Justice Department and "no enthusiasm for puruging" it of "wrongdoers or incompetents," a House committee that inquired into the department declared. The report also severely criticized former Assistant Attorney General Vanech.

A "conspiracy" to fix prices and hamper competitors in the liquor business was charged against the parent Seagrams and Schenley companies by the Federal Trade Commission. The complaints are believed to be the first step in a wide attack on holding companies accused of price-fixing among their subsidiaries.

General Smith's statement that Communists might have infiltrated Government security agencies has had several political repercussions. After the Republican National Committee had exploited this in a radio "expose", General Smith urged General Eisenhower to stop the political use of the remarks. The Republican candidate replied he had not known about the "expose" and would look into it. President Truman accepted General Smith's explanation of the train of events.

On the political front, President Truman, dedicating the Hungry Horse Dam in Montana, described General Eisenhower as a pliable mouthpiece of the private power

Japan's Liberals Win Clear Majority

Complete unofficial returns also left the Japanese Communist party without a single member of the Diet's House of Representatives.

Gen. Herren Says Quick Action Foiled Escape

Cheju Island—An American General declared tonight that Wednesday's bloody riot by inmates of the Cheju Island prison camp was part of a plan for a mass breakout by 5,800 pro-Communist Chinese war prisoners. Maj. Gen. Thomas W. Herren said the swift action of American troops who quelled the uprising in a battle that took the lives of 56 Chinese foiled the wholesale escape plot. Herren said the plan called for the 5,800 Chinese to break out and join Red guerrillas in the South Korean mountains.

Six Overcome by Smoke from Locomotive

New York—Six persons were reported treated for smoke inhalation today when a fire in a Pennsylvania railroad electric locomotive stalled the train in the tunnel leading into Pennsylvania station. Several hundred persons were reported slightly affected by the smoke as the stalled train backed up 12 other trains. The train had just passed through the Jersey meadows when the fire broke out. The crew extinguished the blaze, but acrid fumes and heavy smoke filled the tunnel, choking the passengers.

MORE HORSES UNDER HOOD

News from Detroit, automobile capital, is that some 1952 creations will be equipped with power plants developing more than 200 horsepower. Does this mean they will have higher top speed? Probably, although that does not seem to be the reason for the stepped-up power. What this extra power will provide, auto men say — believe it or not — is increased economy.

Yep, more miles per gallon. The reasoning seems to be that, as engine size will be increased little if at all, the extra power squeezed out of the power unit by higher compression and similar design changes will not require more gasoline, and the increased power will result in a lighter foot on the throttle.

Compression ratios of 10 to 1 are on the way, if not next year then the year following. Gasoline of 100 octane rating to make such motors feasible will be available, it is predicted. Highest compression ratio of any current model engine is slightly better than 8 to 1, and gasoline with octane rating of 92 is now available—both great advances over 10 years ago.

Engine weight per horsepower has decreased 50 per cent in the last 50 years, with great increase in efficiency and gasoline economy. But the industry is not content to rest on its laurels, and there are predictions that similar results will be achieved in the next 15 years.

Another reason for the great increase in horsepower in the more luxurious automotive creations is a competitive battle which seems to be shaping up between top lines of the big three automobile manufacturers and one independent which formerly had a sizable slice of this market. Competition is something prospective purchasers of cars should anticipate with glee.

If politicians were as smart as they insist they are, campaigning would be held in abeyance until the World Series has been fought to a finish.

When life was simpler, the World Series was stretched out for nine games and a main item in political campaigns was the cost of red fire for parades.

In Most Cases, It's Better For Child To Walk To School

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

YEAR by year, more and more children living only a few blocks from school are hauled there by parents in cars, or by school busses.

Something may be said for driving the kindergarten and first grade child for safety reasons on any day and especially on stormy days. But regularly to haul the older child who lives less than a mile from school is to render him overdependent and to deny him of wholesome outdoor exercise. Moreover, for some children to be hauled to school while other children walk can make the hauled children feel superior, hampering good school growth in democracy.

Safety Impaired

Furthermore, at some elementary schools on any school morning there may be so many cars, some driven by parents who don't observe good traffic rules, as to impair safety for all the children arriving at school. Many an elementary principal tries in vain to prevail on parents who live close to the school to let these children walk.

Most high school children live farther from school than do the younger children. Yet it's amazing how many high school youths drive the family car or their own to school less than a mile away, or from greater distances, even when there are busses or trolley cars available.

While a few of these youths are safe drivers, most of them are not. They often load their cars heavily with other students and thus increase the hazards to all of them. At noontime they may take a crowded car of schoolmates for a jaunt about the neighborhood, when dangers to the riders and pedestrians run very high.

Usually Harmful

The prevailing urges in a high school youth to drive to school are prestige among his schoolmates, pomp and privilege, usually most harmful to the student with the car.

If the student drives the family car the parents may be inconvenienced. The father may walk to work and the mother to market in order to let the son or daughter have the luxury of driving the family car to school.

And as for letting a high school student own a car to drive to school, how absurd! Barring the few instances when a youth lives at a great distance from school and far from common transportation lines, the high school student has no more need of a car than he has of a rhinoceros. His parents, however wealthy, would be kind to him and all other persons of the community if they let him have no car.

MORE HORSES UNDER HOOD

News from Detroit, automobile capital, is that some 1952 creations will be equipped with power plants developing more than 200 horsepower. Does this mean they will have higher top speed? Probably, although that does not seem to be the reason for the stepped-up power. What this extra power will provide, auto men say — believe it or not — is increased economy.

Yep, more miles per gallon. The reasoning seems to be that, as engine size will be increased little if at all, the extra power squeezed out of the power unit by higher compression and similar design changes will not require more gasoline, and the increased power will result in a lighter foot on the throttle.

Compression ratios of 10 to 1 are on the way, if not next year then the year following. Gasoline of 100 octane rating to make such motors feasible will be available, it is predicted. Highest compression ratio of any current model engine is slightly better than 8 to 1, and gasoline with octane rating of 92 is now available—both great advances over 10 years ago.

Engine weight per horsepower has decreased 50 per cent in the last 50 years, with great increase in efficiency and gasoline economy. But the industry is not content to rest on its laurels, and there are predictions that similar results will be achieved in the next 15 years.

Another reason for the great increase in horsepower in the more luxurious automotive creations is a competitive battle which seems to be shaping up between top lines of the big three automobile manufacturers and one independent which formerly had a sizable slice of this market. Competition is something prospective purchasers of cars should anticipate with glee.

If politicians were as smart as they insist they are, campaigning would be held in abeyance until the World Series has been fought to a finish.

When life was simpler, the World Series was stretched out for nine games and a main item in political campaigns was the cost of red fire for parades.

In Most Cases, It's Better For Child To Walk To School

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

YEAR by year, more and more children living only a few blocks from school are hauled there by parents in cars, or by school busses.

Something may be said for driving the kindergarten and first grade child for safety reasons on any day and especially on stormy days. But regularly to haul the older child who lives less than a mile from school is to render him overdependent and to deny him of wholesome outdoor exercise. Moreover, for some children to be hauled to school while other children walk can make the hauled children feel superior, hampering good school growth in democracy.

Safety Impaired

Furthermore, at some elementary schools on any school morning there may be so many cars, some driven by parents who don't observe good traffic rules, as to impair safety for all the children arriving at school. Many an elementary principal tries in vain to prevail on parents who live close to the school to let these children walk.

Most high school children live farther from school than do the younger children. Yet it's amazing how many high school youths drive the family car or their own to school less than a mile away, or from greater distances, even when there are busses or trolley cars available.

While a few of these youths are safe drivers, most of them are not. They often load their cars heavily with other students and thus increase the hazards to all of them. At noontime they may take a crowded car of schoolmates for a jaunt about the neighborhood, when dangers to the riders and pedestrians run very high.

Usually Harmful

The prevailing urges in a high school youth to drive to school are prestige among his schoolmates, pomp and privilege, usually most harmful to the student with the car.

If the student drives the family car the parents may be inconvenienced. The father may walk to work and the mother to market in order to let the son or daughter have the luxury of driving the family car to school.

And as for letting a high school student own a car to drive to school, how absurd! Barring the few instances when a youth lives at a great distance from school and far from common transportation lines, the high school student has no more need of a car than he has of a rhinoceros. His parents, however wealthy, would be kind to him and all other persons of the community if they let him have no car.

Common sense dictates that, if possible, ground breaking must be officially started prior to any other hospital activity.

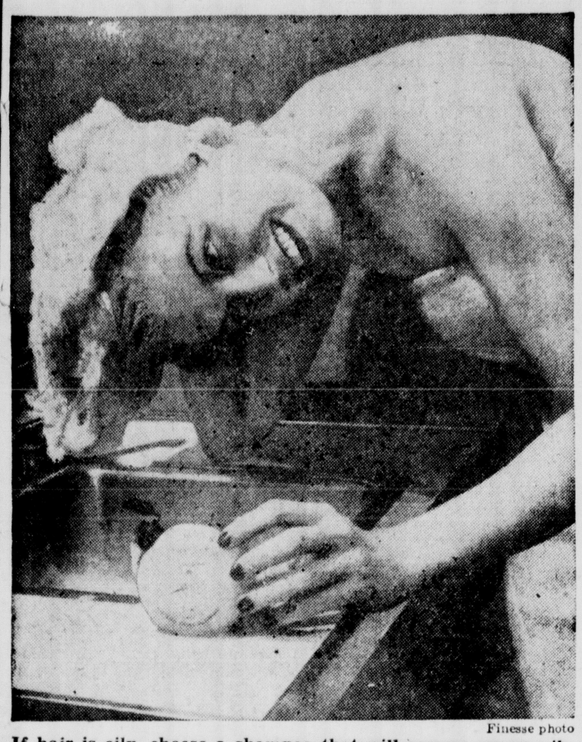
If Hair Is Oily, Choose And Use Shampoo Agent With Care



Finesse photo

If hair is oily, choose a shampoo that will remove excess oils and dust. One such offering comes in a handy plastic bottle.

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAIR that carries natural luster, that glistens in the sunlight like the raven's wing, is beguiling to the eye. Not so tresses that are heavily lubricated with the exudations of the sebaceous glands. They lack fluff and life; they cling to the scalp with stubborn persistence; they won't keep curly for sour apples. Excessively oily hair is no minor good-looks complaint.

The trouble may be found in careless shampooing, suds not being completely removed, scum clinging to the shafts that deprives them of the coil quality that forms waves and ringlets. When buying a shampoo agent, look carefully at the labels if you belong to the oily contingent. There are special ones now for dry locks and shining tendrils.

Warm Spray

Start with a warm spraying to remove surface dust. Distribute the soap or cream well, spread thumbs and fingers over your scalp and rub like everything! The more friction the better. Give special attention to the forward hair line, where a little powder may be lodged despite all your care.

Don't fancy that you can have a rousing rinsing in the wash bowl. You'll need a spray and a current of water strong enough to rattle your brains. A vinegar rinse is a help. Add four tablespoonful of cider vinegar to a wash bowl of water, pour over your head.

Comb Wet Hair

Use the comb instead of the brush when your head is wet. Start combing at the ends of the hair. You'll get the tangles out with less discomfort and you won't be as likely to break the shafts as if you start combing in front and bear down violently to the ends. Use the coarse teeth of the comb first, then the finer ones.

When making curls, try the little clamps that are to be had at notions counters. They are good anchors, and you won't be shedding them all over the place because they stay put.

NEW FIBRES IN THE RUG INDUSTRY OFFER VARIETY FOR HOME

By Frances Vannoy
Home Economics
Extension Representative

Less than 50 years ago wool was the only fiber used to make rugs and carpets. Today wool, rayon, acetate, fiber E (viscose rayon), nylon, linen, and cotton are used in the rug and carpet industry.

Cotton rugs, available in a cut pile, a low twisted loop, a high twisted loop, and in a variety of weaves, are reasonable in cost, nonallergic, and mothproof. However, cotton rugs stain easily and stain removal is difficult. They soil easily and mat down, and are not colorfast to light. If sized, cotton rugs will mildew. Although the smaller cotton rugs can be washed in a family size washer, the larger ones need commercial dry cleaning.

Linen rugs are more expensive than cotton and ofter are made so the rugs are reversible. There is no pile to crush down and hold dirt, but linen does show soil. It is hard to dye linen so the colors are fast but colors do fade evenly.

About 70 per cent of the rug production the past year was in blends. Production is still in the experimental stage, and consumers who buy a blend in a carpet or rug must realize this fact. Time is required to perfect new fibers. Carpets of rayon or acetate are most commonly blended with 50 per cent wool. When rayon or acetate is blended with wool, it gives added strength but it also weakens fiber strength when wet, crushes readily, and the carpet is likely to lose shape due to the shifting of yarns.

At present fiber E is being made into throw rugs and 9 by 12's. It is a viscose rayon process which gives it strength, built in crimp, dyeability; fiber E will mildew, weaken when wet, and may lose shape.

Nyon is resistant to soil, mothproof, and will stand hard use. It is very expensive. Nylon may change color but most manufacturers will redye their product.

Bus, Two Passenger Cars Damaged; 1 Man Treated

LANGHORNE, Oct. 2 — An accident involving a Neibauer bus and two passenger cars took place last evening at 5:55 at the intersection of Bellevue avenue and the super highway.

According to police report, the bus, operated by Irving J. Fox, 810 Washington avenue, Croydon, enroute north on Bellevue avenue, was attempting to cross the superhighway, when, it is reported, a 1952 sedan operated by Harris Ticktin, 28 Lakeside Drive, West, Levittown, travelling east on the superhighway struck the right side of the bus. Before the driver of the bus could bring the vehicle to a halt, it side-swiped a 1951 sedan driven by Mrs. Lydia E. Davenport, Somerton, who had stopped at a "stop" sign, headed south on Bellevue avenue. Damage to the vehicles was reported to be: Ticktin's, $500; Davenport's, $100; and to the bus, $100.

Seven passengers were riding in the bus at the time. Ticktin was removed to a local physicians office where he was treated for shock. Trevose Heights Rescue Squad was sumoned but services were not required. Chief Howard Shook, of Middletown twp. investigated.

If hair is oily, choose a shampoo that will remove excess oils and dust. One such offering comes in a handy plastic bottle.

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAIR that carries natural luster, that glistens in the sunlight like the raven's wing, is beguiling to the eye. Not so tresses that are heavily lubricated with the exudations of the sebaceous glands. They lack fluff and life; they cling to the scalp with stubborn persistence; they won't keep curly for sour apples. Excessively oily hair is no minor good-looks complaint.

The trouble may be found in careless shampooing, suds not being completely removed, scum clinging to the shafts that deprives them of the coil quality that forms waves and ringlets. When buying a shampoo agent, look carefully at the labels if you belong to the oily contingent. There are special ones now for dry locks and shining tendrils.

Warm Spray

Start with a warm spraying to remove surface dust. Distribute the soap or cream well, spread thumbs and fingers over your scalp and rub like everything! The more friction the better. Give special attention to the forward hair line, where a little powder may be lodged despite all your care.

Don't fancy that you can have a rousing rinsing in the wash bowl. You'll need a spray and a current of water strong enough to rattle your brains. A vinegar rinse is a help. Add four tablespoonful of cider vinegar to a wash bowl of water, pour over your head.

Comb Wet Hair

Use the comb instead of the brush when your head is wet. Start combing at the ends of the hair. You'll get the tangles out with less discomfort and you won't be as likely to break the shafts as if you start combing in front and bear down violently to the ends. Use the coarse teeth of the comb first, then the finer ones.

When making curls, try the little clamps that are to be had at notions counters. They are good anchors, and you won't be shedding them all over the place because they stay put.

NEW FIBRES IN THE RUG INDUSTRY OFFER VARIETY FOR HOME

By Frances Vannoy
Home Economics
Extension Representative

Less than 50 years ago wool was the only fiber used to make rugs and carpets. Today wool, rayon, acetate, fiber E (viscose rayon), nylon, linen, and cotton are used in the rug and carpet industry.

Cotton rugs, available in a cut pile, a low twisted loop, a high twisted loop, and in a variety of weaves, are reasonable in cost, nonallergic, and mothproof. However, cotton rugs stain easily and stain removal is difficult. They soil easily and mat down, and are not colorfast to light. If soiled, cotton rugs will mildew. Although the smaller cotton rugs can be washed in a family size washer, the larger ones need commercial dry cleaning.

Linen rugs are more expensive than cotton and ofter are made so the rugs are reversible. There is no pile to crush down and hold dirt, but linen does show soil. It is hard to dye linen so the colors are fast but colors do fade evenly.

About 70 per cent of the rug production the past year was in blends. Production is still in the experimental stage, and consumers who buy a blend in a carpet or rug must realize this fact. Time is required to perfect new fibers. Carpets of rayon or acetate are most commonly blended with 50 per cent wool. When rayon or acetate is blended with wool, it gives added strength but it also weakens fiber strength when wet, crushes readily, and the carpet is likely to lose shape due to the shifting of yarns.

At present fiber E is being made into throw rugs and 9 by 12's. It is a viscose rayon process which gives it strength, built in crimp, dyeability; fiber E will mildew, weaken when wet, and may lose shape.

Nyon is resistant to soil, mothproof, and will stand hard use. It is very expensive. Nylon may change color but most manufacturers will redye their product.

Cornwells is one of the 10 Greater Philadelphia stops on the round-robin route of one day showings by the circus this year supplanting a lengthy stand at one central Philadelphia location.

C. W. Poston, president of Cornwells Fire Co., No. 1, heads Cornwells arrangements, assisted by Reese Thomas, ticket chairman; James H. Jackson, treasurer; Calvin Freas, assistant chief; and J. Maurice Tomlinson. All members of Cornwells Co. No. 1 have reduced-price advance tickets, from which heaviest proceeds for the firemen's building fund are realized, on sale now. "Fifty per cent from advance adult tickets, against only 10 per cent from show day sales, go into the local fund," Mr. Thomas said today. "With reduced prices in effect, patrons can not only provide the heaviest help to the local fund by procuring tickets early, but also save themselves money."

Forty tons of elephants are animal highlights of the circus, the world's largest motorized one, and which appears exclusively under clubs and civic groups on its national tour. Performing personnel includes artists from 18 countries, including Swiss, Chinese, Dutch, French, Italian, German, Austrian, English, Chilean and other importations.

NICCOL — In sad and loving memory of Louis S. Niccol, who passed away October 2, 1950.
'Tis but two years ago today,
Since God called you away,
Sad and sudden was the call,
Of one so dearly loved by all.
A bitter grief, a shock severe,
It was to part with one so dear,
We often sit and think of you,
And speak of how you died,
To think you could not say goodbye,
Before you closed your eyes.
For all of us you did your best,
Oh, God grant you eternal rest.
Dearly loved in life and sadly missed in death by

Cornwells is one of the 10 Greater Philadelphia stops on the round-robin route of one day showings by the circus this year supplanting a lengthy stand at one central Philadelphia location.

C. W. Poston, president of Cornwells Fire Co., No. 1, heads Cornwells arrangements, assisted by Reese Thomas, ticket chairman; James H. Jackson, treasurer; Calvin Freas, assistant chief; and J. Maurice Tomlinson. All members of Cornwells Co. No. 1 have reduced-price advance tickets, from which heaviest proceeds for the firemen's building fund are realized, on sale now. "Fifty per cent from advance adult tickets, against only 10 per cent from show day sales, go into the local fund," Mr. Thomas said today. "With reduced prices in effect, patrons can not only provide the heaviest help to the local fund by procuring tickets early, but also save themselves money."

Forty tons of elephants are animal highlights of the circus, the world's largest motorized one, and which appears exclusively under clubs and civic groups on its national tour. Performing personnel includes artists from 18 countries, including Swiss, Chinese, Dutch, French, Italian, German, Austrian, English, Chilean and other importations.

NICCOL — In sad and loving memory of Louis S. Niccol, who passed away October 2, 1950.

'Tis but two years ago today,
Since God called you away,
Sad and sudden was the call,
Of one so dearly loved by all.
A bitter grief, a shock severe,
It was to part with one so dear,
We often sit and think of you,
And speak of how you died,
To think you could not say goodbye,
Before you closed your eyes.
For all of us you did your best,
Oh, God grant you eternal rest.
Dearly loved in life and sadly missed

ABOUT CHRISTIAN GROWTH

Growth or development is one of the great laws of the universe. Great trees were originally little seed. The full grown man was once a little baby. The house was originally a dream in some one's mind. God makes the world interesting, beautiful and perfect each day by the process of growth. By sunshine, rain, the soft earth the farmer cultivates the seed until the grass appears, the flowers bloom and the trees bear fruit. The farmer waters and cultivates, while God gives the climate and the temperature. To the seed is given nourishing energy and the ability to adapt itself. The result is growth. Wherever man works with God, there growth takes place. Neglecting to work with God brings retarded growth or what is known as arrested development.

A teacher, in a Bible school had two glass bowls of fish. One contained tropical fish the other gold fish. With these she illustrated growth with proper care and feeding. The tropical fish needed a warmer water than the gold fish. One morning, upon arrival at school the teacher discovered some of the tropical fish had died. Upon investigation she discovered the children had made a mistake. The water they had added to the tropical fish had been too cold. The result was death.

There are a number of ways whereby God has provided for the growth of men and women. For the development of their bodies He has provided food, fresh air and sunshine. For the mind there are thoughts and ideas. For the soul there is religion. When we eat too little or the wrong kind of food the growth of our bodies is affected. If we do not get the proper amount of sunshine and fresh air we do not grow as we ought. If we refuse to think new ideas and thoughts and make no new discoveries with our minds we will not develop mentally in the proper way. If we indulge in the wrong pleasures and recreations our emotions become perverted. In the same manner, if we neglect to practice the elements of religion, our spiritual development is retarded or even arrested.

Growth is a gradual process. The toad stool springs up over night, but not the oak tree. But the toad stool soon vanishes away while the oak remains for many generations. Christians do not spring up into perfection in a night. They must grow. And the one beautiful thing about religious growth, like mental growth there need be no end to it.

Now Jesus grew while upon the earth. He grew in wisdom (mentally) in stature (physically) in favor with God (religiously) and with man (socially). So we as disciples of His ought also to grow. Growing as He did we shall also win the approbation of God and take upon us the likeness of our Master.

My prayer: Blessed God, today marks a new step in my Christian career. I do not desire to remain in the same position as a Christian. I want to grow and learn more about Thee. I bring my heart to Thee for Guidance. Though I may not understand every step of the way, grant me Thy grace and tender guidance that though the means of grace and the instruments of the Christian Church I may grow in spiritual stature, filled with love for Thee and all Thou dost love. Be Thou my teacher and my guide. Show me how to follow in Thy footsteps in active Christian devotion and fellowship, every day of my life.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis were guests of honor at a dinner at their Philadlphia home Sunday in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary. The affair was given by their sons and daughters, Mrs. Wayne Woodland, Bristol; Mrs. Albert Younginger, Bristol Heights; William Lewis, Mrs. Charles Gleason, Mrs. Mary Maier, Phila., and Mrs. James Laughlin, Northfield, N. J. One of the great-grandchildren, Ina Cantino, Phila., presented the honored couple with a bouquet of 50 white roses, a gift from the grandchildren. A golden loving cup was a gift from the great-grandchildren. The couple's children presented them with a "money-tree." They received many bouquets and cards. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis have six children, 17 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. Their family totals 50 members. Guests included the following from this area: Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis and children Roseann, Laura Mae and John, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Embessi and son Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Woodalnd and children, Jeanine, Wayne and Franklin, Bristol; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Younginger, Sr., and sons Richard and Edward, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Maier and children "Debbie" Jane and Harry, Bristol Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Maier and children, Debbie Jane and Harry, formerly of Phila., are staying with Mrs. Maier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Younginger, Sr., Bristol Heights, until their new house in Bristol Heights is ready for occupancy.

Ladies Aid members of Zion Lutheran Church will meet this evening at eight at the home of Mrs. Gertrude Palmer, 200 Mill street.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Girard, 709 Pine street, are the parents of a son born Tuesday in Bristol General Hospital. The infant weighed 8 lbs.

HULMEVILLE

Funeral took place at Natick, Mass., yesterday for Percival W. Valentine, husband of Marian Gill Valentine. Death of Mr. Valentine occurred Saturday in a nursing home in Brooklyn, N. Y. Mrs. Valentine formerly resided here. Other survivors of Mr. Valentine are a daughter, four grandchildren, and two sisters. The deceased, who was a salesman, had retired several years ago. He had been in ill health for a lengthy period of time. Miss Helen E. Gill, Philadelphia, is spending several days with her sister, Mrs. Valentine.

Edward Davis participated in a trip to Scranton yesterday and enjoyed a tour of a coal mine in that area. He brought back as a souvenir some coal which he was privileged to "mine."

ABOUT CHRISTIAN GROWTH

Growth or development is one of the great laws of the universe. Great trees were originally little seed. The full grown man was once a little baby. The house was originally a dream in some one's mind. God makes the world interesting, beautiful and perfect each day by the process of growth. By sunshine, rain, the soft earth the farmer cultivates the seed until the grass appears, the flowers bloom and the trees bear fruit. The farmer waters and cultivates, while God gives the climate and the temperature. To the seed is given nourishing energy and the ability to adapt itself. The result is growth. Wherever man works with God, there growth takes place. Neglecting to work with God brings retarded growth or what is known as arrested development.

A teacher, in a Bible school had two glass bowls of fish. One contained tropical fish the other gold fish. With these she illustrated growth with proper care and feeding. The tropical fish needed a warmer water than the gold fish. One morning, upon arrival at school the teacher discovered some of the tropical fish had died. Upon investigation she discovered the children had made a mistake. The water they had added to the tropical fish had been too cold. The result was death.

There are a number of ways whereby God has provided for the growth of men and women. For the development of their bodies He has provided food, fresh air and sunshine. For the mind there are thoughts and ideas. For the soul there is religion. When we eat too little or the wrong kind of food the growth of our bodies is affected. If we do not get the proper amount of sunshine and fresh air we do not grow as we ought. If we refuse to think new ideas and thoughts and make no new discoveries with our minds we will not develop mentally in the proper way. If we indulge in the wrong pleasures and recreations our emotions become perverted. In the same manner, if we neglect to practice the elements of religion, our spiritual development is retarded or even arrested.

Growth is a gradual process. The toad stool springs up over night, but not the oak tree. But the toad stool soon vanishes away while the oak remains for many generations. Christians do not spring up into perfection in a night. They must grow. And the one beautiful thing about religious growth, like mental growth there need be no end to it.

Now Jesus grew while upon the earth. He grew in wisdom (mentally) in stature (physically) in favor with God (religiously) and with man (socially). So we as disciples of His ought also to grow. Growing as He did we shall also win the approbation of God and take upon us the likeness of our Master.

My prayer: Blessed God, today marks a new step in my Christian career. I do not desire to remain in the same position as a Christian. I want to grow and learn more about Thee. I bring my heart to Thee for Guidance. Though I may not understand every step of the way, grant me Thy grace and tender guidance that though the means of grace and the instruments of the Christian Church I may grow in spiritual stature, filled with love for Thee and all Thou dost love. Be Thou my teacher and my guide. Show me how to follow in Thy footsteps in active Christian devotion and fellowship, every day of my life.

gratuity. Some said they would be willing to do it for nothing at all as their particular contribution to better educational facilities in the area which they believe a well-attended PTA can help bring about.

The idea was originally broached at a meeting of the Neshaminy PTA Executive Committee, by Mrs. Kurt Klockenthoer, Jr., of the Ways and Means Committee and, when the girls heard about it, they were quick to respond. The plan is unique and the one hope of the girls is that, if they are willing to do their bit to encourage greater attendance at PTA meetings, parents will respond in kind.

A list of the girls who have volunteered their services has been prepared and it is understood that if parents who wish to attend the October 14th meeting and need a babysitter will call Mrs. Klockenthoer at Langhorne 3242, the name of a volunteer babysitter in the neighborhood will be provided.

The Executive Committee said that it would announce full details of the October 14th meeting next week.

This sewer line will connect the disposal plant at Newportville with lines of the Fairless Hills project and will be five miles in length, according to Sussamn. At present ground is being cleared preliminary to the laying of the sewer line, and the entire pipe-line project is expected to be completed by the first of the year, he explained.

KITCHEN CLUES

By Olga Curtis
(INS Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK — (INS) — Statistics on home accidents have shown for years that women and children have the dubious honor of being first on the list of burn casualties.

Home safety advisors at the U. S. Department of Agriculture believe this record could be changed if housewives would take a few simple safety measures in their kitchens.

Hot fat that spatters or tips over is one big cause of serious burns. So never lift a kettle of hot fat. Wait until the fat cools down before moving it. And when you place anything to cook in hot fat, do it carefully, with a pair of tongs instead of your fingers if possible.

Here's another simple rule to follow when cooking. Always make sure that pan handles are turned away from the edge of the stove so that you won't accidetally knock off the pans. Use pans with flat bottoms that stand steady on the stove, and make sure the pot handles are on tight — so they won't loosen or turn when you lift the hot pan.

Before you take a hot pan off the stove, by the way, have a place ready for it so you won't be swinging around clutching the hot pan while you're looking for a place to set it. And remember to raise the cover on the far side first, so the steam will come out away from you.

One rule that's repeated time and time again — but keeps getting overlooked — is to keep any fabric or paper in your kitchen far, far away from the stove or any flame or heating unit. That goes for curtains, dishclothes, paper calendars, recipe clippings and collections of paper bags.

Have plenty of thick pot holders around, and use them dry — not wet. A wet pot holder can give you a steam burn. Incidentally, round potholders seem to be safer than square pot holders because they fit the hand and have no corners that might droop down into the flame.

One of the best all-purpose, and year-round vegetables you can get is snap beans. They're not very glamorous, but they've got vitamins, they're economical, and they can be tasty if handled right.

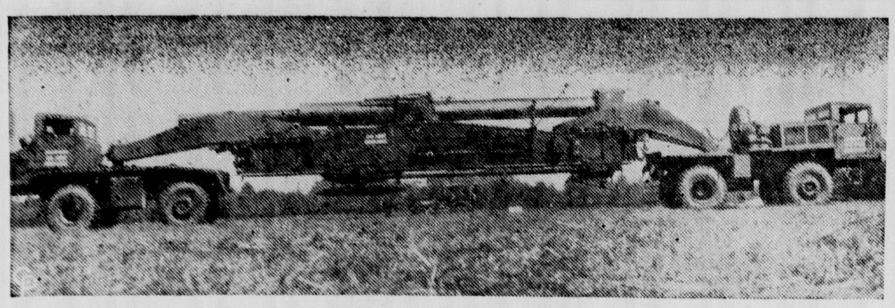
Snap beans can be eaten fresh, they're good for canning, and freeze successfully. Unfortunately, they have to be in perfect condition to do their best — and all too often, the housewife gets tough, limp and stringy beans.

The simplest rule to remember in buying any variety of snap beans — green, or wax, of yellow-pod — is to make sure they really snap. A firm, crisp and tender bean will snap readily when it's broken. If it doesn't snap, it won't taste good.

Top quality beans are clean, fresh-looking, firm but tender and unmarked. Try to get pods in which the seeds are still immature.

If you're planning to buy fresh beans for dinner, figure about three cups of beans to the pound. Three cups of fresh green beans will give you four average servings.

Charles A. Lindberg received honors at Washington, D. C., on June 11, after his 1927 trans-Atlantic flight.



PICTURED FOR THE FIRST TIME is the U. S. Army's mightiest piece of artillery, capable of firing both conventional and atomic shells, with four times greater accuracy at long range than any mobile artillery pieces developed prior to World War II. Shown above is a view of the gun ready to travel, with its barrel resting on the duel-unit transporter. The driver, who uses an inter-com to communicate with the rear end of the 85-ton unit, has control of both units, although each machine can be operated independently.

The poem, "September," by Helen Hunt Jackson, has provided inspiration to fifth grade for observation of signs of the season. In the surroundings, pupils observed that "the golden rod is yellow;" that "the corn is turning brown;" that "the trees in apple orchard with fruit are bending down;" that "in dusty pods the milkweed its hidden silk has spun;" that "at noon the roads all flutter with yellow butterflies." Enrichment and appreciation of nature study experiences has resulted.

The children of Wistar have taken a tour of our "campus." The children have made the acquaintance of a duck who inhabits the pond below the playground. Some classes have seen him swimming although when too many children are about he retires to the far end of the pond and quacks his displeasure.

The teachers have utilized the many wild plants and flowers found in the fields around the buildings as the basis of fall nature study units. In addition to the actual identification of the plants the classes have studied the methods of seed dispersal.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Today's bride — besides being lovely, engaged and a user of cleansing cream —should keep her eye on Daddy's dollar.

For this reason, she must choose a wedding gown that is not only pretty and traditional enough to fit in with her dreams, but practical too.

A bride next season can be as regal as ever and still find herself a dress that will live beyond the blue tissue paper storage stage.

According to the New York Dress Institute, an organization that represents some of the top name designers in America, there's a rising trend toward using a little more color in wedding gowns.

The first favorites will continue to be white and ivory, of course, but brides will also be wearing more pink and mauve shades.

There will be all types of convertible gowns . . . silk sheaths with lace overskirts that can be removed, to make the dress a formal; gowns with traditional long-sleeved high-necked jackets that can be put away later to reveal a strapless evening dress; even gowns with zip-out or snap-in yokes.

The fabrics for the latest wedding gowns come in a wide range, for both the practical and impractical bride. There will be the most luxurious of them all, silk satin, along with taffetas, nylon nets, tulles and laces.

Most highly-recommended for budget-conscious newly-weds, of course, is nylon net—a perfect imitation of gauzy tulle, but more durable.

Some of the most practical wedding dresses will have detachable trains, so that when the train is removed, the bride has a strapless sheath dress for dinner and dancing in the seasons that follow the honeymoon.

And a few may even have detachable sleeves, which can be snapped out to furnish the simple, sleeveless dinner dress so popular this season.

Bridesmaids' dresses are less "bridesmaidish" than usual, and designed to wear later as evening dresses. To help achieve this look, many manufacturers are turning out the attendants' frocks in the gayest of colors, rather than sugary pastels.

The favorites? . . . burnt orange, emerald green, gold, shrimp purple, and champagne.

Says Levitt's Offer

bring the total cost of the ground up to the figure for which Levitt has offered to sell. The property has a 3908 foot frontage and this frontage is being charged for at the rate of $10 per front foot, which, according to Doheny, Levitt claims is below cost for the utilities.

The ground site which is now being offered for sale to the school board is ground which the board selected after the site on the Mill Creek road, which Levitt had previously offered, was rejected by the board because of the extra cost of draining the "swamp" ground located there.

Doheny mentioned that one of the main features of the Levitt advertisements was the part up-to-date schools would play in the new community. "All you have to do is to read the ads he puts out," said Doheny, "to know what I mean."

Doheny contrasted Levitt's price with what he called the "reasonable" figure the Danhurst Corporation had charged the school board for land. He said that George Galbraith, president of that corporation had allowed the township the use of houses as temporary classrooms until the Oxford Valley School was completed. "That's what I call cooperation" said Doheny.

Doheny stated in addition that work is expected to start Monday on the addition to the Fallsington school.

He said further, "I understand that there are those who are still advocating the use of prefabricated houses for temporary classrooms. I'm very much against it. I'm still for the standard classroom, and that goes for the Levittown children as well as the children of older residents of the township."

POKER LOSER

ERIE, (INS) — Leonard L. Hudy of Edinboro, took his poker too seriously one night. His wife, Lorraine, was granted a divorce when she charged that Hudy, out playing poker, neglected to pick her up after her discharge from the maternity hospital.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

THE CHILL of autumn turns thoughts to warming meals. One thrifty but hearty dish in keeping with the season is acorn squash stuffed with cooked smoked pork. The A & P Service for Homemakers suggests this version for four servings.

Cut two medium acorn squash in half and remove seeds. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place in a shallow pan, cut side down, in one-quarter inch of water. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) till done, about 45 minutes. Turn cut side up in pan. Mix three-fourths cup of medium white sauce with one and one-half cups of cooked smoked pork (or pork sausage or chicken, if you prefer) and season to taste. Fill the cavities of the squash with the mixture and sprinkle one cup of fine fresh bread crumbs, buttered, over the top. Return to oven till the crumbs are browned, or brown under broiler.

For dessert that's warming and delicious, serve a peach cobbler. Sift into bowl: two cups of flour, two teaspoons of double-acting baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt and one tablespoon of sugar. With a pastry blender, cut in one-half cup of shortening until fine. Add three-fourths cup of milk to make a soft dough. Combine one No. 2½ can of sliced peaches, one tablespoon of lemon juice, two tablespoons of sugar, one-half teaspoon of cinnamon and one teaspoon of butter in casserole. Pat out shortcake dough to fit top. Bake in 450 degree oven for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees for 25 minutes longer or until crust is golden brown. Serve warm with one cup of light cream, sweetened to taste and flavored with nutmeg.

gratuity. Some said they would be willing to do it for nothing at all as their particular contribution to better educational facilities in the area which they believe a well-attended PTA can help bring about.

The idea was originally broached at a meeting of the Neshaminy PTA Executive Committee, by Mrs. Kurt Klockenthoer, Jr., of the Ways and Means Committee and, when the girls heard about it, they were quick to respond. The plan is unique and the one hope of the girls is that, if they are willing to do their bit to encourage greater attendance at PTA meetings, parents will respond in kind.

A list of the girls who have volunteered their services has been prepared and it is understood that if parents who wish to attend the October 14th meeting and need a babysitter will call Mrs. Klockenthoer at Langhorne 3242, the name of a volunteer babysitter in the neighborhood will be provided.

The Executive Committee said that it would announce full details of the October 14th meeting next week.

This sewer line will connect the disposal plant at Newportville with lines of the Fairless Hills project and will be five miles in length, according to Sussamn. At present ground is being cleared preliminary to the laying of the sewer line, and the entire pipe-line project is expected to be completed by the first of the year, he explained.

KITCHEN CLUES

By Olga Curtis
(INS Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK — (INS) — Statistics on home accidents have shown for years that women and children have the dubious honor of being first on the list of burn casualties.

Home safety advisors at the U. S. Department of Agriculture believe this record could be changed if housewives would take a few simple safety measures in their kitchens.

Hot fat that spatters or tips over is one big cause of serious burns. So never lift a kettle of hot fat. Wait until the fat cools down before moving it. And when you place anything to cook in hot fat, do it carefully, with a pair of tongs instead of your fingers if possible.

Here's another simple rule to follow when cooking. Always make sure that pan handles are turned away from the edge of the stove so that you won't accidetally knock off the pans. Use pans with flat bottoms that stand steady on the stove, and make sure the pot handles are on tight — so they won't loosen or turn when you lift the hot pan.

Before you take a hot pan off the stove, by the way, have a place ready for it so you won't be swinging around clutching the hot pan while you're looking for a place to set it. And remember to raise the cover on the far side first, so the steam will come out away from you.

One rule that's repeated time and time again — but keeps getting overlooked — is to keep any fabric or paper in your kitchen far, far away from the stove or any flame or heating unit. That goes for curtains, dishclothes, paper calendars, recipe clippings and collections of paper bags.

Have plenty of thick pot holders around, and use them dry — not wet. A wet pot holder can give you a steam burn. Incidentally, round potholders seem to be safer than square pot holders because they fit the hand and have no corners that might droop down into the flame.

One of the best all-purpose, and year-round vegetables you can get is snap beans. They're not very glamorous, but they've got vitamins, they're economical, and they can be tasty if handled right.

Snap beans can be eaten fresh, they're good for canning, and freeze successfully. Unfortunately, they have to be in perfect condition to do their best — and all too often, the housewife gets tough, limp and stringy beans.

The simplest rule to remember in buying any variety of snap beans — green, or wax, of yellow-pod — is to make sure they really snap. A firm, crisp and tender bean will snap readily when it's broken. If it doesn't snap, it won't taste good.

Top quality beans are clean, fresh-looking, firm but tender and unmarked. Try to get pods in which the seeds are still immature.

If you're planning to buy fresh beans for dinner, figure about three cups of beans to the pound. Three cups of fresh green beans will give you four average servings.

Bristol Township Elementary School

The poem, "September," by Helen Hunt Jackson, has provided inspiration to fifth grade for observation of signs of the season. In the surroundings, pupils observed that "the golden rod is yellow;" that "the corn is turning brown;" that "the trees in apple orchard with fruit are bending down;" that "in dusty pods the milkweed its hidden silk has spun;" that "at noon the roads all flutter with yellow butterflies." Enrichment and appreciation of nature study experiences has resulted.

The children of Wistar have taken a tour of our "campus." The children have made the acquaintance of a duck who inhabits the pond below the playground. Some classes have seen him swimming although when too many children are about he retires to the far end of the pond and quacks his displeasure.

The teachers have utilized the many wild plants and flowers found in the fields around the buildings as the basis of fall nature study units. In addition to the actual identification of the plants the classes have studied the methods of seed dispersal.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Today's bride — besides being lovely, engaged and a user of cleansing cream —should keep her eye on Daddy's dollar.

For this reason, she must choose a wedding gown that is not only pretty and traditional enough to fit in with her dreams, but practical too.

A bride next season can be as regal as ever and still find herself a dress that will live beyond the blue tissue paper storage stage.

According to the New York Dress Institute, an organization that represents some of the top name designers in America, there's a rising trend toward using a little more color in wedding gowns.

The first favorites will continue to be white and ivory, of course, but brides will also be wearing more pink and mauve shades.

There will be all types of convertible gowns . . . silk sheaths with lace overskirts that can be removed, to make the dress a formal; gowns with traditional long-sleeved high-necked jackets that can be put away later to reveal a strapless evening dress; even gowns with zip-out or snap-in yokes.

The fabrics for the latest wedding gowns come in a wide range, for both the practical and impractical bride. There will be the most luxurious of them all, silk satin, along with taffetas, nylon nets, tulles and laces.

Most highly-recommended for budget-conscious newly-weds, of course, is nylon net—a perfect imitation of gauzy tulle, but more durable.

Some of the most practical wedding dresses will have detachable trains, so that when the train is removed, the bride has a strapless sheath dress for dinner and dancing in the seasons that follow the honeymoon.

And a few may even have detachable sleeves, which can be snapped out to furnish the simple, sleeveless dinner dress so popular this season.

Bridesmaids' dresses are less "bridesmaidish" than usual, and designed to wear later as evening dresses. To help achieve this look, many manufacturers are turning out the attendants' frocks in the gayest of colors, rather than sugary pastels.

The favorites? . . . burnt orange, emerald green, gold, shrimp purple, and champagne.

bring the total cost of the ground up to the figure for which Levitt has offered to sell. The property has a 3908 foot frontage and this frontage is being charged for at the rate of $10 per front foot, which, according to Doheny, Levitt claims is below cost for the utilities.

The ground site which is now being offered for sale to the school board is ground which the board selected after the site on the Mill Creek road, which Levitt had previously offered, was rejected by the board because of the extra cost of draining the "swamp" ground located there.

Doheny mentioned that one of the main features of the Levitt advertisements was the part up-to-date schools would play in the new community. "All you have to do is to read the ads he puts out," said Doheny, "to know what I mean."

Doheny contrasted Levitt's price with what he called the "reasonable" figure the Danhurst Corporation had charged the school board for land. He said that George Galbraith, president of that corporation had allowed the township the use of houses as temporary classrooms until the Oxford Valley School was completed. "That's what I call cooperation" said Doheny.

Doheny stated in addition that work is expected to start Monday on the addition to the Fallsington school.

He said further, "I understand that there are those who are still advocating the use of prefabricated houses for temporary classrooms. I'm very much against it. I'm still for the standard classroom, and that goes for the Levittown children as well as the children of older residents of the township."

POKER LOSER

ERIE, (INS) — Leonard L. Hudy of Edinboro, took his poker too seriously one night. His wife, Lorraine, was granted a divorce when she charged that Hudy, out playing poker, neglected to pick her up after her discharge from the maternity hospital.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

THE CHILL of autumn turns thoughts to warming meals. One thrifty but hearty dish in keeping with the season is acorn squash stuffed with cooked smoked pork. The A & P Service for Homemakers suggests this version for four servings.

Cut two medium acorn squash in half and remove seeds. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place in a shallow pan, cut side down, in one-quarter inch of water. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) till done, about 45 minutes. Turn cut side up in pan. Mix three-fourths cup of medium white sauce with one and one-half cups of cooked smoked pork (or pork sausage or chicken, if you prefer) and season to taste. Fill the cavities of the squash with the mixture and sprinkle one cup of fine fresh bread crumbs, buttered, over the top. Return to oven till the crumbs are browned, or brown under broiler.

For dessert that's warming and delicious, serve a peach cobbler. Sift into bowl: two cups of flour, two teaspoons of double-acting baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt and one tablespoon of sugar. With a pastry blender, cut in one-half cup of shortening until fine. Add three-fourths cup of milk to make a soft dough. Combine one No. 2½ can of sliced peaches, one tablespoon of lemon juice, two tablespoons of sugar, one-half teaspoon of cinnamon and one teaspoon of butter in casserole. Pat out shortcake dough to fit top. Bake in 450 degree oven for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees for 25 minutes longer or until crust is golden brown. Serve warm with one cup of light cream, sweetened to taste and flavored with nutmeg.

3-Lane Highway is More Dangerous Than 2-Lane

Statistics Prove That Wide Road is Not Always A Safe One

By International News Service

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 2—(INS)—A wide road is not always a safe road.

In fact, statistics prove that a road wide enough for three lanes of traffic is almost always more dangerous to travel than a two-lane highway.

It is also more dangerous than a four-lane highway or divided expressway.

The toll of recent accidents in the Albany Metropolitan Area is proof of the danger inherent in the outmoded three-lane road. Of a total of some 25 accidents occurring over a recent week-end, the greatest number occurred on three-lane highways.

Once thought to be the acme of road design, the triple-laner has boomeranged upon those who fought for it and turned out to be an invitation to disaster.

A continuing study jointly sponsored by the United States Bureau of Roads and the National Safety Council discloses that where traffic exceeds 9,000 vehicles per day the three-lane highway is almost five times as dangerous as the two-lane road.

The percentage of accidents per million vehicle miles is 11.1 on the three-lane strip as against 2.6 on the two-lane in this category. For the same number of cars the toll on a four-lane highway is 3.8. On a four-lane-divided highway it is 4.1 accidents per million vehicle miles.

In other words where traffic exceeds 9,000 vehicles per day the two-lane highway has the lowest incidence of accidents of all its competitors.

The general average of all volumes of traffic still shows the three-lane road leading in accidents with 5.0 per mvm as compared with 3.7 for both the two-lane and the four-lane-undivided and 3.8 for divided-four-lane.

Only where traffic is between 5,000 and 9,000 vehicles per day is the three-laner exceeded in accidents. In this category it rates 4.1 accidents per mvm while the two-lane sister rates 4.5.

Where traffic is less than 5,000 vehicles daily the three-lane road again scores ahead of both two and four-lanes with 3.8 accidents per mvm versus 3.5 and 2.3 respectively.

Engineers say the two-lane road is safest because only the most unwary or careless driver will go out of his lane unless there is plenty of room in which to pass and get back in line.

On the three-lane highway the common type of accident is the severe head-on jolt, usually fatal to someone, caused when two drivers proceeding in opposite directions get into the center lane at about the same time.

One minute the lane is clear for pasing. The next minute it is a scene of carnage.

At least on the four-lane highway there is generally room for the cars to pass in both directions. Only when one side is traveled by a road hog who follows the line between his two lanes, or when the faster car pulls too far out, do passing accidents occur.

In New York state there are now slightly more than 900 miles of three-lane highway. This is but 6.6 per cent of the total miles of state road.

Neither the state nor the Federal Bureau of Roads will build a three-laner any more. Unfortunately, though the designers and engineers have learned the danger too many drivers still have not.

Result — danger; and often — sudden death!

NEWS OF SCHOOLS IN AREA---

All public, private and parochial schools in the Bristol area are invited to send news items for publication in this column which appears frequently.

Bucks County High School students will have the opportunity of hearing transcriptions of the story behind our Federal Government, a radio series known as "Freedom, U. S. A.," sponsored by Seaboard Container Corporation of Bristol. After each broadcast the transcription will be sent to the County Film Library.

The original half-hour, nonpartisan dramatic series stars and features Tyrone Power, who lives, breathes and brings to life the role of Senator Dean Edwards, who puts the people's rights above political fights. Adding to the authenticity of "Freedom, U. S. A.," famous Washington correspondent and commentator, Edwin C. Hill, depicts the human side of the Senate. He helps listeners to a more complete knowledge of governmental procedure, and offers absorbing commentary that takes the audience behind the scenes, covering the rising career of a United States Senator.

The radio program is broadcast on Sunday at 6.30 p. m. over WIP, Philadelphia. The transcriptions are made available to the Bucks County Audio-Visual Aid Library by the Seaboard Container Corporation.

Bristol Township

Miss Rosemarie Miles, president of the Bristol Township Teachers Association, has selected teachers in the various township schools to serve as her contacts with fellow-teachers in their respective buildings.

This year the Bristol township elementary and high schools are operating under such a staggered schedule that very few opportunities are available for the members of the faculty to meet together; so Miss Miles assembled a group of building representatives who will operate as contacts between her and the members of the association.

The teachers on this committee are: Miss Dorothy Reichert (Community - Kindergarten); Vernon Morris (Croydon); Charles Buckwald (Delhaas); Miss Felice Delli-Pizzi (Edgely Intermediate); Mrs. Sue Parsons (Edgely Primary); James Foley (Laurel Bend); Miss Betty Ann Bacon (Maple Shade); Mrs. Barbara Elliott (Newportville); and George Skeeba (Wistar Institute).

Assisting Miss Miles on the executive committee are fellow officers, Mrs. Ethel Friel, vice-president; Miss Anna Louise Getz, secretary; and Miss Felice Delli-Pizzi, treasurer.

The first Democratic convention met in Baltimore, Md., in 1832.

NEWS OF SCHOOLS IN AREA---

All public, private and parochial schools in the Bristol area are invited to send news items for publication in this column which appears frequently.

Bucks County High School students will have the opportunity of hearing transcriptions of the story behind our Federal Government, a radio series known as "Freedom, U. S. A.," sponsored by Seaboard Container Corporation of Bristol. After each broadcast the transcription will be sent to the County Film Library.

The original half-hour, nonpartisan dramatic series stars and features Tyrone Power, who lives, breathes and brings to life the role of Senator Dean Edwards, who puts the people's rights above political fights. Adding to the authenticity of "Freedom, U. S. A.," famous Washington correspondent and commentator, Edwin C. Hill, depicts the human side of the Senate. He helps listeners to a more complete knowledge of governmental procedure, and offers absorbing commentary that takes the audience behind the scenes, covering the rising career of a United States Senator.

The radio program is broadcast on Sunday at 6.30 p. m. over WIP, Philadelphia. The transcriptions are made available to the Bucks County Audio-Visual Aid Library by the Seaboard Container Corporation.

Bristol Township

Miss Rosemarie Miles, president of the Bristol Township Teachers Association, has selected teachers in the various township schools to serve as her contacts with fellow-teachers in their respective buildings.

This year the Bristol township elementary and high schools are operating under such a staggered schedule that very few opportunities are available for the members of the faculty to meet together; so Miss Miles assembled a group of building representatives who will operate as contacts between her and the members of the association.

The teachers on this committee are: Miss Dorothy Reichert (Community - Kindergarten); Vernon Morris (Croydon); Charles Buckwald (Delhaas); Miss Felice Delli-Pizzi (Edgely Intermediate); Mrs. Sue Parsons (Edgely Primary); James Foley (Laurel Bend); Miss Betty Ann Bacon (Maple Shade); Mrs. Barbara Elliott (Newportville); and George Skeeba (Wistar Institute).

Assisting Miss Miles on the executive committee are fellow officers, Mrs. Ethel Friel, vice-president; Miss Anna Louise Getz, secretary; and Miss Felice Delli-Pizzi, treasurer.

The first Democratic convention met in Baltimore, Md., in 1832.

United States Troops

wear blue jeans than kimonos; political purges and taxi drivers hellbent for the last roundup.

Japan got back its sovereignty last April, but no one seems to know what to do with a good hunk of the windfall.

Lots of folks, mostly old-timers who remember the days when burlesque houses, didn't clutter the scenery, want to rid the capital of every reminder of the occupation. They are getting a big fight from lots of others who like U. S. jazz and think stuff called ice cream on a stick is here to stay.

Anyway, so long as American troops — although deliberately inconspicuous in Tokyo — are still around on "security duty," the Japanese are too polite to make many changes.

The result can be amusing, and confusing.

One of the hangovers is the widespread use of English. Many Japanese made a valiant stab at learning, and succeeded. Some others are too proud to admit they failed, like the receptionist at the Tokyo Press Club who asked what I wanted when I walked in for the first time.

"I'd like lunch," I said.

"One moment, please," he smiled. Then in a booming voice: "Call for Mr. Lunch. Call for Mr. Lunch."

Take the quaint, cavelike hotel, showplace of Tokyo—once Army-occupied but now back in civilian hands. Low-bowing managers and low-curtseying maids in their kimonos and sashes carry you back for a moment to old Japan, dreams of cherry blossoms and saki.

The romance ends as soon as you walk through the venetian-blind door into your room. It leads directly to a big, fire-engine red sign cut in unmistakable Army stencil: "Do not smoke in bed!"

There are Japanese youngsters fishing in the imperial outer moat now, the lotus-loaded canal that circles Emperor Hirohito's sacred palace grounds for almost four miles.

The idea of kids fishing in the moat was as unthinkable before the occupation as Japanese lovers strolling hand-in-hand in public. But it's here and the youngsters, and the lovers, want to know who's going to change it.

Critics claim that Americans introduced noise to Tokyo, but whomever is to blame, the city is a candidate for title of world's most nerve-wracking city.

Tokyo drivers lead in decibel damage. They are crazy about the big built-in bugles in U. S. autos and like to play games, like sneaking up behind pedestrians and blasting them off the road with sheer concussion.

They've got big and little horns, brassy and shrill horns, horns that sound like factory whistles and horns that make like jet engines.

They fit into the pattern because traffic lights in Tokyo clang away when they change from red to green. Street cars come around the bend sounding like hospital ambulances, noodle peddlers blow eerie tunes on pushcart pipes, paper boys clang clusters of bells to advertise extras and above it all loudspeakers blare out boogie woogie from store fronts.

And they like their neon signs. At night the whole city lights up like the Christmas tree in New York's Rockefeller Center. In some blocks there are 50 blazing extravaganzas, all exactly alike.

On the bigger places, like some of the 2,000 night clubs that were thrown together to compete for the GI business in the old days, the signs are mazes of garish colors that do everything but bend into the street to comb your hair.

Some rotate like windmills, others seem to explode in showers of fireworks and one even enacts a scene of Geisha girls in action.

GI's and Geisha girls, incidentally, didn't mix too well in Tokyo. And, if there is one Japanese tradition that remains intact today, it is the time-honored trade of the Geisha houses.

Geishas are not to be confused with "Tokyo girls," the cabaret hostesses and camp followers who made life rough for Army chaplains who were bent on keeping their flocks on the straight and narrow.

Geishas are a class apart. They are tagged for career from the cradle and spend the years between 10 and 18 learning how to be charming hostesses, singers and musicians.

Their job is to provide innocent fun and company for dinner guests. Most trade in Geisha houses comes from tired businessmen looking for a pleasant meal and relaxation.

The bills many of these businessmen run up at Geisha houses are presented to their wives for payment, for in many Japanese families women control the pocketbook.

For centuries wives have been paying for their husband's fun at Geisha houses. It's an old, quaint custom.

And maybe it's just as well Americans didn't try to change it.

LEVITTOWN, Oct. 2 — Both of Harris I. Ticktin's parents had operations at Jewish Hospital in succesive weeks and that's how he met the nurse who became his wife.

Ruth, a native of Trenton, who received her training at the Philadelphia hospital, and was on duty there, was assigned to take care of the father the first week and the mother the second. Harris met her when he visited his convalescent parents. Now there's a third member of the family, Barry, who's 11 months old. The family dog, Sabre, is an energetic pedigreed boxer. The Ticktins moved from Philadelphia to 28 Lakeside Drive, west, September 10.

Mr. Ticktin is a draftsman and designer with the Chase Aircraft Co., of Trenton and formerly worked for the Atomic Energy Commission at its Philadelphia office. He is an amateur photographer and takes a special interest in making movies. He is studying for an engineering degree at Temple University night school. A former Navy man, he was on the crew of the aircraft carrier Independance during World War II.

Mrs. Ticktin, before becoming a nurse planned to teach art and studied four years at the Trenton School of Industrial Arts. As a pastime, she enjoys making pen and ink sketches.

LEVITTOWN, Oct. 2—Fall and football mean fun to most of us, but to Adam P. Donzanti, of 45 Spring Lane, the gridiron season means a lot of extra work.

Mr. Donzanti coaches the junior high football team at Pennsbury high school, where he teaches math and automobile driving. In addition to games and practice sessions, there are other football games that he attends all over the county.

He and his wife moved to Levittown August 19 from an apartment in Frankford, so that their home would be closer to his work. Mr. Donzanti is a graduate of West Chester State Teachers College, where he played varsity football. He also played football at Upper Darby High School. He served in the Navy during World War II.

Mrs. Donzanti, who comes from North Philadelphia, was a stenographer for the legislative commitee of City Council. She hopes to find secretarial work nearby. As a hobby she enjoys painting, which she studied at the Moore Institute of Art.

The Donzantis are decorating their living room in French Provincial style, with window blinds and furniture of that design. The all-purpose room will become a den.

Become 1,000th Family To Move To Levittown

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Hoover Move In Upon Their 2nd Wedding Anniversary

By Staff Reporter

LEVITTOWN, Oct. 2 — The 23rd of Sept. was a big day for Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Hoover. It was their second wedding anniversary, and it was the day on which they moved to 249 Lakeside Drive East, and became Levittown's 1000th family.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoover came from Roslyn, with their five-month-old daughter, Kathryn Edith. Mr. Hoover is an acountant with, A. A. Martin, Inc., Phila.

Mr. Hoover's hometown is Elizabeth, Pa., while his wife, Nancy, comes from Bayside, Long Island. They met as students at Susquehanna University, and were graduated together in 1949. Between graduation and their marriage she was a medical secretary at Manhasset Hospital, L. I. An Army veteran, Mr. Hoover served with the Medical Corps in the Pacific theater in World War II.

The Hoovers have some relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hope, and children, who live on Strawberry Lane. Mr. Hope is a cousin of Mrs. Hoover. There are three Hope children, one-year-old twins Cindy and Richard, and three-year-old Peter. Mrs. Hoover's mother, Mrs. Harry W. Everett, of Bayside, L. I., has a daughter and a nephew and their families to welcome her whenever she comes to Levittown.

RE-ENACT NEWLY-WEDS' RITUAL

On his second wedding anniversary, Robert S. Hoover enacted the traditional ritual of newlyweds by carrying his wife, Nancy, over the threshhold of their Levittown home, as they moved in on Sept. 23. The Hoovers are the 1,000 family to occupy a Levittown house. They live, with five-month-old Kathryn Edith Hoover, at 249 Lakeside Drive East.

LEVITTOWN, Oct. 2 — Both of Harris I. Ticktin's parents had operations at Jewish Hospital in succesive weeks and that's how he met the nurse who became his wife.

Ruth, a native of Trenton, who received her training at the Philadelphia hospital, and was on duty there, was assigned to take care of the father the first week and the mother the second. Harris met her when he visited his convalescent parents. Now there's a third member of the family, Barry, who's 11 months old. The family dog, Sabre, is an energetic pedigreed boxer. The Ticktins moved from Philadelphia to 28 Lakeside Drive, west, September 10.

Mr. Ticktin is a draftsman and designer with the Chase Aircraft Co., of Trenton and formerly worked for the Atomic Energy Commission at its Philadelphia office. He is an amateur photographer and takes a special interest in making movies. He is studying for an engineering degree at Temple University night school. A former Navy man, he was on the crew of the aircraft carrier Independance during World War II.

Mrs. Ticktin, before becoming a nurse planned to teach art and studied four years at the Trenton School of Industrial Arts. As a pastime, she enjoys making pen and ink sketches.

LEVITTOWN, Oct. 2—Fall and football mean fun to most of us, but to Adam P. Donzanti, of 45 Spring Lane, the gridiron season means a lot of extra work.

Mr. Donzanti coaches the junior high football team at Pennsbury high school, where he teaches math and automobile driving. In addition to games and practice sessions, there are other football games that he attends all over the county.

He and his wife moved to Levittown August 19 from an apartment in Frankford, so that their home would be closer to his work. Mr. Donzanti is a graduate of West Chester State Teachers College, where he played varsity football. He also played football at Upper Darby High School. He served in the Navy during World War II.

Mrs. Donzanti, who comes from North Philadelphia, was a stenographer for the legislative commitee of City Council. She hopes to find secretarial work nearby. As a hobby she enjoys painting, which she studied at the Moore Institute of Art.

The Donzantis are decorating their living room in French Provincial style, with window blinds and furniture of that design. The all-purpose room will become a den.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1952, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. Political slush funds are far from new. In one form or another, politicos have been gathering in money on the sidelines, frequently to their ultimate embarrassment, ever since this country was established. They probably will continue to do so far into the future.

Most people nowadays know about the eyebrow-lifting activities of Harry Truman and his cohorts. A good many people still remember the 1928 deal whereby John Jacob Raskob, then Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and a group of wealthy friends, picked up the tab for a $250,000 note owed to the Warm Springs Foundation by one Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Al Smith, the Democratic Presidential nominee that year, wanted FDR to make the race for the Governorship of New York. Roosevelt at first refused, saying he had to meet the Warm Springs debt and that he therefore could not afford to get into politics. Smith prevailed on Raskob and Co. to wipe out this objection in the manner stated.

Going back quite a bit further, there's another case about which few people remember much, if anything. For Daniel Webster has gone down in history as one of the nation's all-time outstanding orators, a respected legislator, a great statesman. But Webster had his troubles, too—financial, that is.

Like a certain young Californian named Nixon, Daniel Webster was without any financial backlog to draw on while in public life. Like Mr. Roosevelt but unlike Senator Nixon, Webster used his position and reputation as a lure to bring in cash for his own personal use.

The story involves an active law practice in which Webster made frequent appearances before the Supreme Court, acted as attorney for the Bank of the United States, and even allowed friends and political supporters to supplement his government income with cash contributions, while a member of the Senate.

This opus is not in the slightest degree any effort to detract from the great reputation of Daniel Webster. The story is in all his biographies. For the sake of simplicity, I'll quote the storyy as told in the two-volume work, "Daniel Webster," by Claude Moore Fuess.

"Webster," says Mr. Fuess, "allowed his accounts with business firms to run not only for months but for years, and his relations with banks were usually very complicated. . . . At the Astor House in New York, and at the Revere House in Boston, he rarely paid for room or meals, and the managers were accustomed to charge his bills off to good advertising. He borrowed money for casual expenses from his friends, who, proud of their intimacy with him, were unwilling, in most cases, to remind him of the obligations."

In 1846, Webster had been in private life for a matter of months when a group of friends sought to persuade him to return to the Senate. He said no, that he could not afford it. However, he changed his mind after the friends raised a $37,000 kitty and arranged to have the income paid to him semi-annually.

Webster's relations with the Bank of the United States, which he upheld in Congress as well as in the courts, were not confined to that of attorney and client. They covered the field of debtor and creditor, too.

"That Webster himself," says Mr. Fuess, "frequently took advantage of the facilities of the bank by borrowing money from it, is indisputable. . . . The Washington Globe asserted, on August 23, 1832, without eliciting a denial from Webster, that the latter was, at the time, responsible at the Boston branch for $22,000 and at the central bank for $10,000."

I might point out that 120 years ago, $32,000 was worth several times what it is today. It was a sizeable sum.

The Fuess book quotes documents showing that despite the press of official business while he was a member of the Senate, Webster's income from his private law practice was considerable. For example, it amounted to $13,000, $15,000, and $21,000 respectively for the three years beginning with 1834. His biggest fee during this period was $7,500 for arguing successfully before the Supreme Court, as counsel for the city of New Orleans, that a certain strip of land belonged to the city rather than the United States.

Webster became Secretary of State, for a second time in 1850. But, says Mr. Fuess, he accepted the post only "with a distinct understanding . . . that money should be provided for his urgent needs."

Actually, of course, there is no parallel between the Webster case and the Dick Nixon case. Webster used his extra-curricular funds, apparently without the slightest compunction, for strictly personal affairs. Nixon has used his fund entirely for strictly legitimate political activities, not one cent of it for personal affairs.

And as I said before, it probably will go on as long as does the United States of America.

Become 1,000th Family To Move To Levittown

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Hoover Move In Upon Their 2nd Wedding Anniversary

By Staff Reporter

LEVITTOWN, Oct. 2 — The 23rd of Sept. was a big day for Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Hoover. It was their second wedding anniversary, and it was the day on which they moved to 249 Lakeside Drive East, and became Levittown's 1000th family.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoover came from Roslyn, with their five-month-old daughter, Kathryn Edith. Mr. Hoover is an acountant with, A. A. Martin, Inc., Phila.

Mr. Hoover's hometown is Elizabeth, Pa., while his wife, Nancy, comes from Bayside, Long Island. They met as students at Susquehanna University, and were graduated together in 1949. Between graduation and their marriage she was a medical secretary at Manhasset Hospital, L. I. An Army veteran, Mr. Hoover served with the Medical Corps in the Pacific theater in World War II.

The Hoovers have some relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hope, and children, who live on Strawberry Lane. Mr. Hope is a cousin of Mrs. Hoover. There are three Hope children, one-year-old twins Cindy and Richard, and three-year-old Peter. Mrs. Hoover's mother, Mrs. Harry W. Everett, of Bayside, L. I., has a daughter and a nephew and their families to welcome her whenever she comes to Levittown.

RE-ENACT NEWLY-WEDS' RITUAL

On his second wedding anniversary, Robert S. Hoover enacted the traditional ritual of newlyweds by carrying his wife, Nancy, over the threshhold of their Levittown home, as they moved in on Sept. 23. The Hoovers are the 1,000 family to occupy a Levittown house. They live, with five-month-old Kathryn Edith Hoover, at 249 Lakeside Drive East.

LEVITTOWN, Oct. 2 — Both of Harris I. Ticktin's parents had operations at Jewish Hospital in succesive weeks and that's how he met the nurse who became his wife.

Ruth, a native of Trenton, who received her training at the Philadelphia hospital, and was on duty there, was assigned to take care of the father the first week and the mother the second. Harris met her when he visited his convalescent parents. Now there's a third member of the family, Barry, who's 11 months old. The family dog, Sabre, is an energetic pedigreed boxer. The Ticktins moved from Philadelphia to 28 Lakeside Drive, west, September 10.

Mr. Ticktin is a draftsman and designer with the Chase Aircraft Co., of Trenton and formerly worked for the Atomic Energy Commission at its Philadelphia office. He is an amateur photographer and takes a special interest in making movies. He is studying for an engineering degree at Temple University night school. A former Navy man, he was on the crew of the aircraft carrier Independance during World War II.

Mrs. Ticktin, before becoming a nurse planned to teach art and studied four years at the Trenton School of Industrial Arts. As a pastime, she enjoys making pen and ink sketches.

LEVITTOWN, Oct. 2—Fall and football mean fun to most of us, but to Adam P. Donzanti, of 45 Spring Lane, the gridiron season means a lot of extra work.

Mr. Donzanti coaches the junior high football team at Pennsbury high school, where he teaches math and automobile driving. In addition to games and practice sessions, there are other football games that he attends all over the county.

He and his wife moved to Levittown August 19 from an apartment in Frankford, so that their home would be closer to his work. Mr. Donzanti is a graduate of West Chester State Teachers College, where he played varsity football. He also played football at Upper Darby High School. He served in the Navy during World War II.

Mrs. Donzanti, who comes from North Philadelphia, was a stenographer for the legislative commitee of City Council. She hopes to find secretarial work nearby. As a hobby she enjoys painting, which she studied at the Moore Institute of Art.

The Donzantis are decorating their living room in French Provincial style, with window blinds and furniture of that design. The all-purpose room will become a den.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1952, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. Political slush funds are far from new. In one form or another, politicos have been gathering in money on the sidelines, frequently to their ultimate embarrassment, ever since this country was established. They probably will continue to do so far into the future.

Most people nowadays know about the eyebrow-lifting activities of Harry Truman and his cohorts. A good many people still remember the 1928 deal whereby John Jacob Raskob, then Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and a group of wealthy friends, picked up the tab for a $250,000 note owed to the Warm Springs Foundation by one Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Al Smith, the Democratic Presidential nominee that year, wanted FDR to make the race for the Governorship of New York. Roosevelt at first refused, saying he had to meet the Warm Springs debt and that he therefore could not afford to get into politics. Smith prevailed on Raskob and Co. to wipe out this objection in the manner stated.

Going back quite a bit further, there's another case about which few people remember much, if anything. For Daniel Webster has gone down in history as one of the nation's all-time outstanding orators, a respected legislator, a great statesman. But Webster had his troubles, too—financial, that is.

Like a certain young Californian named Nixon, Daniel Webster was without any financial backlog to draw on while in public life. Like Mr. Roosevelt but unlike Senator Nixon, Webster used his position and reputation as a lure to bring in cash for his own personal use.

The story involves an active law practice in which Webster made frequent appearances before the Supreme Court, acted as attorney for the Bank of the United States, and even allowed friends and political supporters to supplement his government income with cash contributions, while a member of the Senate.

This opus is not in the slightest degree any effort to detract from the great reputation of Daniel Webster. The story is in all his biographies. For the sake of simplicity, I'll quote the storyy as told in the two-volume work, "Daniel Webster," by Claude Moore Fuess.

"Webster," says Mr. Fuess, "allowed his accounts with business firms to run not only for months but for years, and his relations with banks were usually very complicated. . . . At the Astor House in New York, and at the Revere House in Boston, he rarely paid for room or meals, and the managers were accustomed to charge his bills off to good advertising. He borrowed money for casual expenses from his friends, who, proud of their intimacy with him, were unwilling, in most cases, to remind him of the obligations."

In 1846, Webster had been in private life for a matter of months when a group of friends sought to persuade him to return to the Senate. He said no, that he could not afford it. However, he changed his mind after the friends raised a $37,000 kitty and arranged to have the income paid to him semi-annually.

Webster's relations with the Bank of the United States, which he upheld in Congress as well as in the courts, were not confined to that of attorney and client. They covered the field of debtor and creditor, too.

"That Webster himself," says Mr. Fuess, "frequently took advantage of the facilities of the bank by borrowing money from it, is indisputable. . . . The Washington Globe asserted, on August 23, 1832, without eliciting a denial from Webster, that the latter was, at the time, responsible at the Boston branch for $22,000 and at the central bank for $10,000."

I might point out that 120 years ago, $32,000 was worth several times what it is today. It was a sizeable sum.

The Fuess book quotes documents showing that despite the press of official business while he was a member of the Senate, Webster's income from his private law practice was considerable. For example, it amounted to $13,000, $15,000, and $21,000 respectively for the three years beginning with 1834. His biggest fee during this period was $7,500 for arguing successfully before the Supreme Court, as counsel for the city of New Orleans, that a certain strip of land belonged to the city rather than the United States.

Webster became Secretary of State, for a second time in 1850. But, says Mr. Fuess, he accepted the post only "with a distinct understanding . . . that money should be provided for his urgent needs."

Actually, of course, there is no parallel between the Webster case and the Dick Nixon case. Webster used his extra-curricular funds, apparently without the slightest compunction, for strictly personal affairs. Nixon has used his fund entirely for strictly legitimate political activities, not one cent of it for personal affairs.

And as I said before, it probably will go on as long as does the United States of America.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.

Political slush funds are far from new. In one form or another, politicos have been gathering in money on the sidelines, frequently to their ultimate embarrassment, ever since this country was established. They probably will continue to do so far into the future.

Most people nowadays know about the eyebrow-lifting activities of Harry Truman and his cohorts. A good many people still remember the 1928 deal whereby John Jacob Raskob, then Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and a group of wealthy friends, picked up the tab for a $250,000 note owed to the Warm Springs Foundation by one Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Al Smith, the Democratic Presidential nominee that year, wanted FDR to make the race for the Governorship of New York. Roosevelt at first refused, saying he had to meet the Warm Springs debt and that he therefore could not afford to get into politics. Smith prevailed on Raskob and Co. to wipe out this objection in the manner stated.

Going back quite a bit further, there's another case about which few people remember much, if anything. For Daniel Webster has gone down in history as one of the nation's all-time outstanding orators, a respected legislator, a great statesman. But Webster had his troubles, too—financial, that is.

Like a certain young Californian named Nixon, Daniel Webster was without any financial backlog to draw on while in public life. Like Mr. Roosevelt but unlike Senator Nixon, Webster used his position and reputation as a lure to bring in cash for his own personal use.

The story involves an active law practice in which Webster made frequent appearances before the Supreme Court, acted as attorney for the Bank of the United States, and even allowed friends and political supporters to supplement his government income with cash contributions, while a member of the Senate.

This opus is not in the slightest degree any effort to detract from the great reputation of Daniel Webster. The story is in all his biographies. For the sake of simplicity, I'll quote the storyy as told in the two-volume work, "Daniel Webster," by Claude Moore Fuess.

"Webster," says Mr. Fuess, "allowed his accounts with business firms to run not only for months but for years, and his relations with banks were usually very complicated. . . . At the Astor House in New York, and at the Revere House in Boston, he rarely paid for room or meals, and the managers were accustomed to charge his bills off to good advertising. He borrowed money for casual expenses from his friends, who, proud of their intimacy with him, were unwilling, in most cases, to remind him of the obligations."

In 1846, Webster had been in private life for a matter of months when a group of friends sought to persuade him to return to the Senate. He said no, that he could not afford it. However, he changed his mind after the friends raised a $37,000 kitty and arranged to have the income paid to him semi-annually.

Webster's relations with the Bank of the United States, which he upheld in Congress as well as in the courts, were not confined to that of attorney and client. They covered the field of debtor and creditor, too.

"That Webster himself," says Mr. Fuess, "frequently took advantage of the facilities of the bank by borrowing money from it, is indisputable. . . . The Washington Globe asserted, on August 23, 1832, without eliciting a denial from Webster, that the latter was, at the time, responsible at the Boston branch for $22,000 and at the central bank for $10,000."

I might point out that 120 years ago, $32,000 was worth several times what it is today. It was a sizeable sum.

The Fuess book quotes documents showing that despite the press of official business while he was a member of the Senate, Webster's income from his private law practice was considerable. For example, it amounted to $13,000, $15,000, and $21,000 respectively for the three years beginning with 1834. His biggest fee during this period was $7,500 for arguing successfully before the Supreme Court, as counsel for the city of New Orleans, that a certain strip of land belonged to the city rather than the United States.

Webster became Secretary of State, for a second time in 1850. But, says Mr. Fuess, he accepted the post only "with a distinct understanding . . . that money should be provided for his urgent needs."

Actually, of course, there is no parallel between the Webster case and the Dick Nixon case. Webster used his extra-curricular funds, apparently without the slightest compunction, for strictly personal affairs. Nixon has used his fund entirely for strictly legitimate political activities, not one cent of it for personal affairs.

And as I said before, it probably will go on as long as does the United States of America.

M. S. T. S. Employs Nearly 29 Thousand Persons

Unit's Job is To Provide Ocean Transportation For Personnel and Materiel

PARIS, Oct. 2 — (INS) — Since its inception, three years ago, The United States Military Sea Transportation Service (MSTS) has grown into an organization which employs nearly 29 thousand persons and operates more than 400 ships over the seven seas.

The duty of MSTS is to "provide ocean transportation of personnel and materiel for all agencies of the Department of Defense" and "as authorized" for other departments of the United States Government.

MSTS cargos have included everything from G. I.'s to diapered dependents of military personnel and from airplanes to safety pins.

Prior to the establishment of MSTS, ocean transportation of military manpower and materials was divided between the Naval Transportation Service and the Army Transportation Corps.

Shortly after World War II., the Department of Defense undertook to unify the Armed Forces.

After a series of studies, the Secretary of Defense authorized establishment within the Naval Department of a single sea transportation service for the Armed Forces.

Thus, on October 1, 1949, the MSTS set up operation under the command of Vice Admiral William M. Callaghan, USN.

The MSTS fleet falls into two main categories: 180 ocean-going ships owned outright by the Navy and over 200 vessels chartered from commercial owners.

Of the Navy-owned ships, roughly one-sixth are commissioned Naval vessels, manned by white-hatted gobs; about one-half are Civil Service-manned ships; the remainder operate under civilian contract.

The organization's principal goal is "flexibility." MSTS maintains itself at the right size for each job by a system of chartering commercial vessels.

If military demands slacken, MSTS releases chartered ships to normal civilian trade and if demand grows, the organization simply charters more ships.

Although MSTS was less than one year old when the Korean hostilities began, the sudden demand of getting a completely equipped army across the Pacific was met successfully.

During its first two years of operation, MSTS carried over 34 million measurement tons of cargo, 168 million barrels of petroleum products and over two million eight-hundred thousand passengers.

MSTS's fleet of gray ships with blue and gold trim operates over sea lanes which, if charter, would make the map of the world look like a fishnet.

TREE ENEMY

KENT, O., (INS) — Amateur tree docs who leave branch stubs in pruning are their trees' worst enemy. So says Martin L. Davey, Jr., tree expert, who points out stubs of any length rarely heal over. Decay sets in and destructive fungi enter the open wounds. Pruning cuts should be made flush with the parent branch or trunk, and waterproof dressing applied.

HEAVY BOOTS

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Colorado Springs justice of the peace H. E. Vohringer fined a Camp Carson soldier $42.50 for driving 80 miles an hour in a 45-mile zone —despite the G.I.'s plea that he didn't realize his heavy artillery boots were pressing so hard on the accelerator.
